A table in the shape of a palette, the brushes tipped with flowers, was used from which to serve the punch; beside the table was an easel, and back of it was an umbrella festooned with smilax under which Miss Jean Hamilton dressed to represent Mrs. Siddons in a Gainsborough costume, stood to serve, she was assisted by Mrs. Tibbles (Bright Eyes), dressed to represent a painting of Longfellow's Hiawatha; Mrs. Greenlee who represented C. Sawyer and Camille DeVriendt dressed as monks, after paintings by Farsky, assisted in the hall. All of those who assisted are members of Miss Parker's art class. The floral decorations were all garden blooms—fuschias, bridal-wreath, and the most magnificent petunias. The large verandah was enclosed with canvas and flags, and hung with pictures. Rugs were scattered over the floor; chairs, settees, and tables strewn with art books were there, and an orchestra played sweet music during the evening.
