On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. E. L. Holyoke and Mrs. R. A. Holyoke, entertained a large number of women at a musicale. The hostesses were assisted by Mesdames Manes, Munger, Kelley and Bailey in the dining room, and by Mrs. Wright, Misses Hargreaves, Ellen Gere and Helen Hoover in the dining room. The drawing room was decorated with meteor roses, and the dining room was exquisite in green and white—roses and smilax being used. Mrs. E. L. Holyoke was attired in white organdie, and Mrs. R. A. Holyoke in white and red taffeta with red velvet trimmings. Those who assisted Mrs. Holyoke with the program were: Mrs. D. A. Campbell, Misses Haywood and Hoover. Mrs. Campbell wore a white taffeta silk skirt with Dresden figures, and a green corsage with pearl trimmings. Miss Haywood's costume was of black liberty silk and Miss Hoover wore white organdie over silk trimmed with black lace insertion. The program was a delightful one and proved that while American composers may not as yet have accomplished much that is great, they have written much that is pleasing. Mrs. Holyoke and Mrs. Campbell were in fine voice and both were recalled. Miss Haywood's group of piano numbers was satisfying and Miss Hoover's accompaniments were all that the most fastidious could desire. The program follows:
