A Mill End Sale. . . .

This store is the medium through which several of the large eastern mills dispose of their season's accumulation of short lengths. We have procured thousands of yards, in mill ends, of calicoes, percales, cottons, ginghams, flannels, tickings, table damask, toweling, black and colored dress goods, linings, embroidery, laces, underwear, blankets, etc., etc., all fresh and new direct from the mill and WILL SELL THEM AT ACTUAL MILL COST

In addition to this we place on sale all the remnants, short lengths, odd lots and broken lines left from our own remarkable season's selling. Every department will take advantage of this event to clear its shelves and counters of all summer merchandise as well as of disposing of every broken line, odd lot or remnant regardless of what it may be.

We promise our patrons a bargain feast, in this sale, such as we have not presented for many years. No one can afford to overlook it.

SALE BEGINS TUESDAY MORNING AUGUST 8TH.

If you can't come to the store send for circular.

THE FIRST NEBRASKA.

San Francisco, Cal., July 31.—At 9:30 this morning the men of the First Nebraska and Utah batteries marched out of the crowded transport dock to meet an ovation of which they perhaps had little dreamed, a deafening demonstration which hailed and welcomed them through the street and all the three mile way to the Presidio.

As early as eight o'clock the command was formed upon the wharf in heavy marching order, to be reviewed by Governor Poynter and Governor Barry, while all San Francisco waited patiently outside Mrs. Van Pelt, out of a huge basket of flowers, placed a bright bouquet upon every dingy blanket roll.

The governor and his staff and the regimental staff and field officers were mounted on spirited cavalry horses, while six ambulances were filled with men who were not able to stand the long march.

Four batteries of the Third artillery, together with their band, acted as an escort, under command of Captain Pratt. They were fittingly assisted by a mounted troop of the Sixth cavalry, Colonel Stotsenburg's old regiment, which, in parade front, stood at present arms while the regiment passed.

Next to the escort came Governor Poynter, with General Barry and an orderly, bearing the blue silken state flag. They preceded Colonel Mulford and his staff Adjutant Whedon, Major Snyder and Lieutenant McLaughlin.

The regiment, headed by the band, followed in company front order of battalions, Lieutenant Colonel Eager commanding the first, Major Taylor the second and Major Killian the third.

The San Francisco committee of arrangements had relays of men on watch, and simultaneously with the order to begin the march, whistles, bells, steam calliopes and mammoth sirens burst forth in tremendous uproar all over the city and bay.

The people crowded about the dock entrance, set up a wild cheer that was passed in growing up and down the
