The friends of Major Pershing will be glad to learn of one of his latest deeds of valor. The Major sailed for Manila about the first of September by way of the Atlantic. After a short visit to some of the principal cities of Europe, he joined a hospital ship at the Suez canal. While on the Mediterranean sea the ship he was aboard met with a collision and began to sink. The Portuguese and Spanish sailors became terrified and forgetting the passengers, many of which were women and children, they ran for the boats. The officers screamed and wrung their hands, but to no avail. Quick as a flash Major Pershing forced the mob back and with the bravery and decision that our American soldiers are noted for, held them back. With his fine commanding figure erect and his voice ringing clear above the cries of the officers and the frightened women and children, he pointed a pistol at their heads and cried in Spanish that he would shoot the first man that touched a boat. The effect was wonderful. The crew halted and stood amazed and not one of them dared move. With his firm eye on the men he motioned for the officers to take their places beside him and pistols in hand they gave orders to lower the boats, one by one. Each boat was manned with a sufficient number of sailors with the women, children, and other passengers, so that not one life was lost.

The Pershing Rifles gave their fourth annual hop at the Hotel Lincoln, Friday night. The company known as the Varsity Rifles was organized in 1893. The organization was due to the efforts of Major John J. Pershing, at that time commandant of the university cadets. Its proficiency is due to his idea of competition, thereby arousing the greatest interest in military affairs. It was during the second year of this successful work, that the Varsity Rifles changed to the name of Pershing Rifles. The captains of Pershing Rifles have all been men who have achieved special distinction in the military world. Up to the present year they were, Charles Elliott, Joe Beardsley, John Dixon, Charles Swartz, William Oury, and Charles Weeks. The dancing hall was decorated in flags and guns. Much of the success of the evening was due to the following committee: Mr. F. C. Williams, master of ceremonies; Mr. G. W. Barnes, chairman of committee; and Messrs. Korsmeyer, Swallow, and Woodland.

The appointment of General Wood as governor of Cuba is approved by the whole country as one of unusual merit. Although he was not the next in line he was the first in merit and talent for this particular position. His immediate appointment of Lieutenant Halsey Yates as captain of the guard is a correspondingly high tribute to Captain Yates' ability and character. For the promotion of a young man so lately graduated to so responsible a position means but one thing and that is exceptional ability and trustworthiness. Captain Yates' many friends in this city are very much pleased by the recognition.
