SOCIETY

Westward the star of empire takes its way! Mrs. Jack Gardiner has been in Chicago for the past week or two. There have been receptions and recitals in her honor. Mr. Proctor, her latest prodigy in a musical way, has played at several of the functions given for her. He is now much thought of as a pianist both in Boeton and Chicago.

Mrs. Gardiner is in mourning, but nevertheless Chicago had looked forward to seeing wonderful gowns and jewels, but its wish was not gratified, for she wore very plain toilettes. Once however, she appeared in the famous Gardiner pearls. These pearls are the size of cherries and they go once around the neck with a loop and then fall to the knees. There is also a wonderful strand of diamonds about a yard long, which Mrs. Gardiner occasionally wears. This necklace goes twice around her neck and falls into her lap, and Mrs. Gardiner has a way of toying with it as if it were a mere nothing. Some man has said, no wonder that she is a brilliant conversationalist. If Lincoln could only produce a genius satisfactory to Mrs. Gardiner, she would offer him no doubt not only the advantages of her purse and her position, but she would come here to see him properly appreciated by his own townemen. Oh, what a bonanza there would be then for the society column of Lincoln newspapers!

As for "Mrs. Jack" herself, she came from New York to Boston some thirty odd years ago, a bride, a plain looking young woman, but full of wit and grace. Mr. Gardiner, her husband, was a man with May Flower ancestors and so young Mrs. Gardiner made her entrance immediately into the blue blood of Boston society; ever since she has been its leader. There are many amusing tales of her eccentricities and her daring. She is a member of Boston's most ritualistic Episcopacy and as a penance once during lent, she appeared in an old gown and scrubbed the floor of the church. She was the first woman to have made a personal examination of Sandow's muscles, and also the first society woman to notice Sargent, paying him 5,000 for her portrait and thus giving him his first popularity. She is the only woman of social prominence who has ever attended one of Corbett's theatrical performances and she is the heroine of Marion Crawford's "To Leeward," of Hamilton Aide's "Voyage of Discovery," of "Mrs. Harry St. John," and "Philip St. Clare." She is the only woman who has ever induced the De Reeske's brothers to sing at a social function. It is said now that she has bought the Pitti palace and that it is to be brought over to Boston, with all of its gallery of pictures, but that Florence should part with this treasure seems not only a sacrilege but an impossibility.

On Friday evening, April the twenty-seventh, the Senior Promenade was given at the Lincoln hotel. There is always a bit of distant rivalry between the Junior and Senior promenades. True, they are far apart, but, a Junior says quietly to himself, "the Seniors can't beat this," and when the time comes for the Senior function, the Senior is so far on his way to the road of parchment glory that his Senior Promenade is the first herald of his alumni days, and hence the most enjoyable and formidable occasion of the year. On Friday evening the scarlet and cream were draped in a peculiarly graceful fashion, the ends of the bunting being gathered together in the centre of the rotunda in two large purple and straw, naughts (the class colors) which represented the ciphers in 1900. Those chaperoning were: Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rhodes, Professor and Mrs. Richards and Mrs. I. S. P. Weeks. Mr. Paul Weeks was chairman of the committee on arrangements and Mr. Fred C. Williams master of ceremonies. The members of the committee were: Messrs. W. R. Mansfield, Burt D. Whedon, F. H. Woodland, F. W. Brown, Morris N. Liebmann. Misses Alberta Spurck, Wiggenshorn, Helen E. Woods, Clara, Hammond, Gladys Henry and Darleen Woodward.

Mrs. Woolworth of Weeping Water is visiting in Lincoln this week.

Pi Beta Phi fraternity was given a banquet at the home of the patron, Mrs. A. J. Sawyer, on Saturday evening, April the twenty-eighth. The tables were spread in octagon form. The decorations were carnations, the fraternity flower. Miss Margaret Kyie was a graceful and gracious toast mistress. Misses Quete Haskell, Grace Reynolds, Amy Robineon, and Gladys Henry and Mr. Sawyer, responded to appropriate toasts. The host and hostess were charming. Miss Anna Stuart and Miss Grace Reynolds furnished some delightful musical numbers.

Mrs. Oren I. Axtell, president of the P. E. O. entertained the members of the club at a high tea on Monday. The weather aired his accomplishments that afternoon, there being glorious sunshine and not any dust and so the guests enjoyed Mrs. Axtell's piazza that she had made comfortable and charming with rugs and cushions. In the house were pink and white carnations. At five o'clock the guests found their places at small tables at which were
