

THEATRICALS.

THE OLIVER.

No production of recent years has given the satisfaction equal to that of the presentation at the Broadway last evening of the new Christian play, "The Prince of the World," by Hal Reid and Bertha Belle Westbrook. The play has a cast of over fifty people with a carload of special scenery and a cage containing a pair of untamed and untrained lions. The scene where "Lesia" is lowered into the cage with the ferocious lions is thrilling enough to suit the lover of the strongest sensations, as these lions are the genuine article and have never had a day of training.

It comes to the Oliver Theatre on Thursday, October 4th, one night only. Prices 25, 50, and 75 cents, and $1.00. Seats on sale Tuesday morning. Secure your seats early.

America's Most Artistic House

After two years' careful search and inquiry the general assent of competent critics decided that the most artistic house in America is located in one of the Middle Atlantic States. The house is unpretentious externally and is little heard of outside certain art circles, but it is indisputably the supreme triumph in interior decorations and furnishing. Its owner and occupant has graciously consented to reveal its artistic beauties to the public through the Ladies' Home Journal, and two whole pages of an early issue of that magazine will be devoted to picturing the interior of this superb home.

"Haven't you noticed how quick-witted I am?" naively asked the girl who played a thinking part in the burlesque. "You? Quick-witted?" inquired the stage manager, somewhat dazed. "How do you make that out?" "Why," sweetly replied the ingenue, "to think with me is to act."
