GOLF NOTES.

Mr. Frank W. Parks has been secured as instructor for the fall season. Mr. Parks is a professional who is well known in the east and in the larger western cities.

It is sadly deplored that the majority of players in this city play the game in complete defiance of golf etiquette. The following two rules are continually being violated: "1. No player should play from a tee until the party in front of him has played his second stroke or is out of range." "2. No player should play to a putting-green until the players ahead have holes out." The observance of these rules, especially of the first one; will prevent serious accidents. Another rule often broken is the one in regard to soling the club in a hazard. This is only allowable in a grass hazard, but in roads, sand bunkers, etc., it is in direct violation of the aforesaid rule, the penalty in match-play being the hole.

In the tournament on last Saturday afternoon, Captain McCreery's side was again victorious by a score of two.

Forty-seven is the lowest score that has been made by the local players on these links, several of the men having attained that record. None of the women players have scored under seventy.

The club is in a flourishing condition, having now over eighty members, and applications for membership are coming in every week.

His illusions are all new this season, and he amuses his audience while performing with a running fire of badinage and witticism.

The company contains fourteen members besides some specialty artists. Monday evening two ladies or one lady and gentleman will be admitted free on one paid 30 cent ticket.

SILHOUETTES.

THE ART OF DOING NOTHING

Marietta pushed her smeary buttered Third Leader as far from her as she could. The Patient Little Girl in front of her felt the force of Marietta's repugnance in the upper half of her spinal column. The book was not Marietta's very own. She was a clean child. It was a dispensation under the Free Text-book Law. The smears and tears were the marks of those who had aforetime come up to the Fourth Reader grade, through much tribulation, Marietta surveyed the book with evident disgust. In fact she stuck out her tongue. Satisfied with this complete expression, she spread her very full gingham skirt way out on either side, making a beautiful fan. Placing one fat hand in each extremity of this creation, she put her dimpled chin on the edge of her desk and looked at the teacher. The teacher was not looking at her. She rested so for a moment, while the light of a new idea dawned in her eyes. Suddenly she sat bolt upright, grasped the desk firmly with both hands, and shook her head from side to side, so violently, that her short flaxen braids stood straight out. The boy across the aisle giggled.

"Marietta Jones!" It was the voice of the teacher. Also, in this case the voice of duty.
