OUIDA ON CHAMBERLAIN.

That very brilliant Frenchwoman, Ouida, has ranged herself with the enemies of Mr. Chamberlain. It is impossible to mistake her meaning. She has adopted no uncertain tone. She dislikes Mr. Chamberlain intensely. The sketch is contained in a new volume of "Critical Studies," which she has recently published. She opens thus on Mr. Chamberlain:

"Several years ago, at the moment when Mr. Chamberlain, having abandoned the liberty party, was adored by the party which calls itself conservative, I looked at him one evening at a dinner in a well known house in Belgrave square. He was standing surrounded by the loveliest and most fashionable women of society, who were offering him a homage which must have been delightful to him."

She goes on to dissect "Master Joe's" features:

"His physiognomy indicates his character; it has no distinction, but it is full of energy, intelligence and resolution; it is the physiognomy of a tradesman, not of a statesman, of a person extremely keen and acute, obstinate and cruel, but not by any means intellectual. The eternal eyeglasses serves to hide such expression as his features might have, and the nose, short and retrousse, make plebian lineaments which might, without this defect, be sufficiently regular. * * * He is always well dressed; 'too well,' an ex-viceyroy murmured to me that evening."

Ouida thinks it is strange to "see Robert Cecil, Marquis of Salisbury, fallen

under the domination of the Birmingham screw-maker."

"In the whole of the tory party, Chamberlain has no one who opposes him, no one who approaches him for strength of character and for acuteness of perception, one may also add, for unscrupulousness in principle and in action. The sole person of the party who could have imposed authority upon him by superiority of intellect would have been Lord Salisbury; but * * * he has been able completely to rule and influence the master of Hatfield, as he has succeeded in ruling and influencing all others who sit around the ministerial table in Downing street. A friend of mine, speaking once to me of Lord Salisbury, whom he knew intimately, said: 'He's a fine, big cannon, but he won't go off; I doubt if he will ever go off.' It is probable that Chamberlain had the same opinion, and therefore resolved himself to manœuvre and fire the cannon. * * * He is 'hard as nails,' he is cynical and selfish, and to a politician of this stamp reputation in history is a matter of extreme indifference."

And this is only an infinitesimal part of what Ouida says, in her wrath, before she gets through with Mr. Chamberlain. —London Globe.
