SOCIETY

Mrs. Angie F. Newman and Mrs. William Owen Thomas gave a dinner at seven o'clock on Wednesday in honor of the McKinley victory. The room was brilliant with a cosmopolitan array of flags, among which the American flag held a prominent position. The doorway was curtained with a long, beautiful flag of the "Stars and Stripes" and around the room were diminutive flags of the many countries in which either Mrs. Newman, Major and Mrs. Stoney or Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have traveled. Among the flags were the French, German, Italian, Spanish, Byzantine, Swiss, Hawaiian and Japanese imperial and navy. The British flag of St. George and St. Andrew was placed effectively on the centre of the side wall. The windows were draped in red, white and blue and the gas lights were shaded with the national colors. The table-centre was a candelabrum in which burned patriotic tapers of red, white and blue, and beneath which protruded wee American flags. McKinley carnations tied with flag ribbon were placed at each cover. The dinner service was red and blue and the national color theme was carried out in the ices and cakes. Four years ago Mrs. Newman, Mrs. Stoney and Mrs. Thomas were just landing at Smyrna when word was brought of the election of McKinley and the same McKinley buttons were worn at the fete on Wednesday evening as at the celebration on the coast of far off Asia Minor when Doctor Barrows telegraphed the congratulation of eleven Americans. Mrs. Newman gave an inspiring toast on

"Hail to the Stars of the free,
 Hail to the Stripes of the brave;
 O'er all lands and all seas
 Some day to wave."

The sorority of Kappa Alpha Theta gave a charming dancing party last evening in honor of Miss Macfarland and Miss Jessie Macfarland at the home of Miss Agnew, the niece of Mrs. Atwood. Unfortunately Miss Jessie Macfarland had to leave for New York from where she soon sails for Europe, before this occasion, given as a farewell greeting to the young ladies. The long, broad hall in Mrs. Atwood's home, possesses such character and distinction, and so graceful is the contour of the rooms opening from it that it was as becoming as a Florentine frame to the many maidens in their fluffly gowns of muslin and chiffon. The invited guests were: Doctors and Mesdames Clements Fling, Lyon and Ladd. Messrs. and Mesdames Hardy and Belcher. Misses Key of Council Bluffs, Post of York, Barr, Macfarland, Armstrong, Foster, Johnson, Agnew, Edgren, Carson, McHenry, Stewart, Weeks, Wirt, Morgan, Douglas, Post, Harper, Paddock, Russell, Elizabeth Paddock, Loomis, Woodford, Ruth Macfarland, Tuttle and Jean Tuttle. Messrs. Walsh, Paine, Mudge, Kind, Brown, Sumner, Clapp, Roth, Pancoast, Baldwin, Adams, Powell, Holt Korsmeyer, Langley, Johnson, Wittmann, Lau, Stein, Crandall. Dewesse, Broady, Atwood, Drain, Don Atwood Thomas, Patterson, Culver and Ustick, the name cards. Profiles were sketched on the cards and the guests found their dinner companions by discovering the counterpart of their profile-sketch. The fluttering ribbons with which the name cards were tied gave not only a cheerful bit of color to the rooms, but also the clue to the particular table to which each guest belonged, as the ribbons were the same color as the flower decorations of each table. Six courses were served. After dinner progressive euchre was the cause of much merriment. Score was kept by black and white china dolls. A petite golden-haired doll in a red frock headed the ribbon upon which the scoring dolls were strung, white indicating a game won and black the reverse. Mr. Everts received the first prize for the gentlemen, a handsome tobacco jar with a Grecian head. Mrs. Seacrest was presented with an effective gold jewelled hat pin for her successful score. The consolation gift was most amusing, being one of those weird wax figures carefully protected by a glass cover. The guests were: Mesdames Milne of Pennsylvania, McMasters of Chicago, and Stiles. Messrs. and Mesdames Seacrest, Spencer, M. W. Folsom, C. H. Rudge, Everts and Metcalf.

In accordance with a custom observed on each quadrennial anniversary, Mr. Thomas P. Kennard invited his friends of varying political faiths to gather at his house on Tuesday night and listen to the election returns. The house was decorated with pictures of the two presidential candidates and by innumerable small silken flags. Each lady present was presented with a flag and a carnation, the latter indicating the party preference of the host. Card tables were provided for those who cared to play, and nuts and candied fruits were served in the intervals between the dispatches, and at eleven o'clock a dainty luncheon was served. When it became evident from the returns that President McKinley was re-elected a telegram of congratulations with the signatures of all men present attached was sent him. Some of those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames C. H. Morrill, A. J. Sawyer, A. S. Tibbets, J. W. Johnson, Underwood, Billmeyer, Burt Davis, George Fawell, R. M. Turner, Kirker, C. I. Jones, R. T. Van Brunt, Henry Mayer, Pickering, A. E. Kennard, Chapin and Wettling. Mesdames Patrick, Wendling and Stoney. Misses Harris, Tibbets, Miller, Nora Miller, Murray, Stella Kirker, Hardy, Mayer, Switzer of California, and Mr. Joe Kennard.

Miss Fay Maraball gave a swimming party on Monday evening in honor of Mrs. Dan Wheeler of Omaha. Those who enjoyed the invigorating plunge were: Mesdames Wheeler, Edward Fitzgerald, Mark Woods, George Strode, Frank Woods, Kelly, Irvine, Nance, Crittenden, Wilkinson, Canfield, Walter Hargreaves, Tilton, Curtice, Wright, L. C. Burr, Dorgan, W. G. Morrison, Mullen, Crancer, Van Riper, George Clark, Ewing, Tomson, N. C. Brock, D. E. Thompson, Leonard, R. H. Oakley, F. W. Brown, Macdonald, Beeson of Omaha, Rector, Griffith, Walsh, Merrill and H. H. Everett. Misses Putnam, Carson, Hoover, Nance, Hollowbush and Sweet of Buffalo. The water is always in a humorous mood, when there is even a
