

Thursday, March 21--Friday, March 22--Saturday, March 23

GRAND MILLINERY OPENING FitzGerald

At Lincoln's Popular Emporium--the Magnificent Display in the latest creations in Trimmed Hats—Hats from Paris—Hats from New York—Hats from our own superior work-rooms, all showing a style exclusive in every detail.

Our trimmers, after spending several weeks in the Metropolis, New York City, returned imbued with the latest ideas in stylish Headwear—prepared to cater to your every whim—guaranteeing a perfect satisfaction in every sale

We are displaying many Swell Pattern Hats, ranging from $5.00 to $35.00, our line from $5.00 to $15.00 being exceedingly strong in popular numbers. We wish you to visit our department whether intent on purchasing or not.

We want you to see the Prettiest and Most Complete Millinery Department in the West.

If our Enterprise is Deserving, we Ask for Your Trade—Our Prices are Always Right.

OUR RED TICKET SALE

WILL CONTINUE MERRILY ON.

The immense success attendant on this Sale the past week demonstrates the reliability of all the FITZGERALD advertising.

Always the best values for the least money at this store.

Many More Unrivalled Bargains in Every Dept. for the Coming Week.

lavishly spent their time and money to make their booths attractive. On the next meeting of the society on the twenty-eighth of the month the expenditure of the sum now possessed by the society will be decided upon.

High School Notes.

In the game Friday night the teams played excellently. On the junior freshmen team, Inis Everett played in her usual form and no higher praise can be given. Ethel Ames made a remarkable goal from the field, and by some clever passing with Miss Everett, scored a second goal at the last of the game. Edith Monigan was a credit to the freshman class, for her guarding and team work were superb. Ruth Bell had a most difficult place, being guarded by Edith Burlingame's tall form, and did not have a chance to throw goals, though in team work she was as good as ever. Inez Crow is a comparatively new player, and the manner of her guarding had much to do with keeping down the score of the other side. The senior sophomore team was composed of excellent players, and Pearl Archibald and Nellie Stevenson did as well as possible against their opponents' close guarding. (I'm a junior and can't help being prejudiced.) Margaret Pillsbury needs no comment and no praise, for her reputation as a player is established and always maintained. Edna King and Edith Burlingame are rather the short and the long of the team, but they can guard.

On Monday morning Dr. Davenport met the class during the first period to discuss the difficulty of Friday afternoon, and the larger questions of class interference, responsibility and self-government. Dr. Davenport took the chair and a frank, good-natured discussion followed, in which most of the class took part. At the end of the period the meeting adjourned, to re-assemble, by Dr. Davenport's advice, after school. The president being absent, the meeting went into a committee of the whole, with George Woods as chairman. After a long and spirited debate, the class decided that class rivalry and interference, if rightly carried out, are justifiable and desirable, and that, with the consent of the principal, they will continue in future, the class to be responsible for any general damage, and individuals to be responsible for individual breaches of courtesy or discipline, except when the class organization is willing to bear the blame. At this meeting also, the report of the program committee was heard and accepted. The committee, especially Rolland Bonnell, has done careful and efficient work, and there is no doubt that the programs will be unusually neat and attractive.

Monday evening an anxious, trembling committee of three entered the lion's den (otherwise the board of education's rooms) and sat down to wait. For some time they sat in silence, growing a little reassured by the evident human nature of the august personages around the table. When Mr. Wood presented the case of the senior class in a brief but eloquent plea. A few sharp questions were asked; $125 was voted for graduating expenses; and the committee fled thankfully.

"By Gee Whiz!" remarked George outside, "I never was so glad to get through in all my life. But wasn't it a snap though?"—The Advocate.

Omaha Notes.

Fort Cook is once more regimental headquarters with a corps of officers, staff and line, and a band of forty-eight men. Company E of the Second battalion of the Tenth, has arrived from Cuba, where for two years it has been on duty. With it came Colonel E. P. Ewers, regimental commander, Capt. Henry Kirby, adjutant, Capt. J. A. Shallenberger, quartermaster, Lieut. Romulus Walton, commissary officer, and Acting Assistant Surgeon Wheate. The other three companies of the battalion went directly through to Fort Mackenzie, Fort Robinson and Fort Niobrara, while the Third battalion under Major Guggan, which has been at Crook for the past year, left Tuesday morning for San Francisco, whence it will sail with the First battalion already there, for the Philippines about the 15th.

The balmy and springlike air of last Saturday and Sunday put a little life into the Country Club and the links were dotted with red and green jackets which moved about to the usual chorus of polite oburgations. Messrs. Lemist, Drake, Cartan, Foye, Cummings, Peck, Stevens, Maul, Cudahy, Wattle, Brady, Guion and Low were all there, besides a number of women and a party of young people. Of course the links are in a rough condition after the winter snows and frosts, but with the added water supply another well will yield and pipes laid to the greens (to say nothing of the increased dues) the course should be much improved this season. If the weather is favorable the club house will be reopened the 1st of April.

On the recent trip of Governor Dietrich and his staff to Washington, Col. J. Cameron Anderson, surgeon general, of Omaha, was tried en route by court-martial, charged with having appropriated shoes belonging to Col. William Hayward, commanding the Second regiment. Full trial was accorded the accused, the court being made up of Brigadier General Barry, Col. Bills and Judge Advocate Brown. The court found against Col. Anderson and fined him an oyster supper for the whole party, which fine was paid handsomely after arriving in Washington.

The banquet to General Lee, which had been contemplated ever since his arrival here as commander of this department, was an accomplished fact on Monday evening at the Commercial club and proved to be an occasion of farewell to the honored guest, who by his recent retirement soon leaves Omaha, not, however, before he had, as Toastmaster Gurley said, "proved that he spoke the language of the tribe." The Commercial club rooms were filled by more than a hundred of "the best people," who were received by General Lee and Dr. Miller, after which the banquet begun. Three long tables extended the length of the room from the table of honor and flowers and plants lent their aid toward making them attractive. The plate cards were tied in ribbons of the national colors and under a flag on the front page was an inscription to General Lee. On the first page was an excellent picture of the guest of the evening, followed by pages containing the menu and program of toasts and a poem written for the occasion by Mr. J. H. Daniels. Mr. Euclid Martin, in the absence of President P. Keene, introduced Mr. W. F. Gurley as toast master. He presented the speakers of the evening.

A dinner was given at the Shoreham in Washington on Tuesday evening to Senator Thurston and some others of the retiring senators by their friends. It is said that Senator Thurston is to receive an appointment from President McKinley.

General Lee was relieved from command of the Department of the Missouri on the second of March and Gen. H. C. Merriam, who happened to be in the city at the time, was placed in command. Both generals expected the