Miss Burr's Recital.

Several years ago Helen Marie Burr, a little girl, left Lincoln to attend a convent school in the east. Last Monday evening she gave a harp recital which shows that she has become a virtuosa of the harp. Miss Burr plays with genuine feeling and with a breadth and catholicity unusual in so young a player. It was very unfortunate that the annual carnival night coincided in time and nearly in place with Miss Burr's recital, but a much older and more experienced artist could not more composedly have ignored the hullabaloo in the street below. She finished an exquisite program, much of whose delicate effect depended upon quiet, in the midst of a howling mob of students with absolute composure. The harpist was assisted by Mr. John Martin, whose lyric tenor voice is growing in steadiness and flexibility, while it retains that youthful quality which distinguishes his singing. Miss Hoover played very sympathetic, correctly shaded accompaniments. Mr. Martin also exhibited strong self control and an artistic aloofness in regard to the noises in the street. The program is appended:

Impromptu	Edward Schaecker
	Helen Marie Burr
Romance	Rubinstein
Serenata	Moszkowski
	Helen Marie Burr
Song—Adelaide	Beethoven
	Mr. John Martin
Legende	Zabel
	Helen Marie Burr
Three Songs	MacDowell
	Mr. John Martin
Autumn	John Thomas
	Helen Marie Burr

Died, on Thursday morning, May the thirtieth, at the home of her nephew, Mr. Willard C. Mills, 1638 F street, Mrs. T. L. Franklin of Philadelphia, after a brief illness. Mrs. Franklin was the widow of the Reverend Thomas L. Franklin, D. D., an Episcopal rector of Philadelphia.
