Mrs. R. G. McGrew gave a charming party to a company of little girls Tuesday evening to celebrate the twelfth birthday of her daughter, Alice Carey McGrew. One amusement followed another rapidly and the time passed very quickly to the happy guests. Conundrums were guessed, tails were pinned on a donkey minus that appendage and then came the supper. Twelve of the young misses were seated at the large round table, the others at a small table. In the centre of the large table was a basket of carnations and ribbons leading from it to the plates. After the repast all encircled the table and at a signal the ribbons were drawn and each secured a flower from which, upon touching a spring, came a fancy paper cap. These were donned and added to the picturesque scene. Instead of the usual birthday cake there was at each plate a small cake on which stood a candle and at each plate was also a fancy bon bon holder filled with sweets. Covers were laid for Misses Alice Cary McGrew, Juliette Atwood, Marjory Agnew, Grace Salisbury, Katherine Lee, Marguerite Taylor, Helen Bigelow, Neta Dunn, Hazel Clawson, Flora Houghton, Louise Guthrie, Eugenia Woods, Clara Hill, Polly Berkson, Lyde Seely, Marguerite Freeman, Jessie Clarke.
