

Cards have been received announcing the marriage on the tenth of May, 1902, of Mr. Charles Clinton Caldwell of this city to Miss May Bostetter of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell will be at home in Lincoln at 1344 M street after June 15. Mr. Caldwell has lived in Lincoln a long time. Considering that he is a bridegroom it is not polite to say just how long. But never mind, he has lived here long enough to make a very large number of friends. He is a ruddy young fellow whose creed is the duty of cheerfulness. He sees the humorous side of the grim visaged world and when his accounts are finally made up the burdens of others he has borne with a smile and a deprecating word will not be forgotten. It is doubtless true that every one has lurking enemies; if Charlie has any they are accomplished lurkers, for no one has ever seen them.

Miss Bostetter was a teacher in Lincoln for a number of years. Latterly she has been at the head of the cataloging department of the Chicago city library. She is a woman of rare sweetness and dignity of character, as well as of ability and culture.

The marriage, though a surprise to their old friends in Lincoln, is attended by best wishes and the positive assurance of happiness and contentment. The old timers who are still serving a life sentence in Lincoln will welcome the new household with sincere pleasure.

Mrs. Caldwell is a sister of Mrs. Pettit, who was also a former resident of Lincoln and also of Mrs. Edward Franklin, sr., of this city.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Gertrude Cutler (born Borders) died at her home in Greenwood on Sunday, May 11, at 6:30 p. m. She was born in Dubuque, Iowa, February 14, 1849. She came to Nebraska in 1860 and made her home with Mrs. T. M. Marquette. Mrs. Marquette was an invalid and Gertrude Borders was sister, companion, nurse and mother to the family. She loved music and laughter and was a favorite in society. Many of the old residents of Lincoln remember her with affection.

She was married at her sister's home in 1877 to Mr. Martin B. Cutler, by Elder Davis, assisted by the Rev. David Marquette. These two ministers preached her funeral services last Tuesday. A mother and a brother survive her. Her character was a structure of beauty and strength. Chronic invalidism could not conquer her deep-seated buoyancy and love of kin and all friends. A few days before her death she said: "I wish I could live until June to see the beautiful flowers in the glory of spring. And yet, if I lived so long I should wish to live longer." Two weeks before her death Mrs. George Fawell, her niece, read her the poem by Mr. Bixby in the Journal about the roses that should be given to mortals before they die instead of being laid on the cold breasts of the dead. The verses were a comfort to her and she repeated them several times.

The T. M.—Couldn't we fire the window ticket-sellers and simply have a phonograph to keep saying: "The whole house is sold out?"

Customer—How much are these cigars a box?

Dealer—There is no charge, sir; and the Tobacco Trust requests your acceptance of this silver cigar case that goes with every box.

of sustaining her husband's high courage to the performance of something worth while for the nation. If so the dreams are fled. But, at any rate, the wife of the president is protected by the Washington code from wasting her time in the most trivial and conventional of social requirements—making calls. This code, which affords Mrs. Roosevelt and has afforded all of her predecessors in the White House so much relief, should be extended to the wives of all officials over this country. I mean all those officials like governors, chancellors, et cetera, whose wives, by virtue of their husbands' official position, receive calls from an unnaturally large circle.

Mrs. Savage, the wife of the governor of Nebraska, is the chatelaine of a large house. Added to her attractive power as the wife of the chief executive she has the graciousness of a cultured woman. Nearly every woman in Lincoln who makes calls has called on Mrs. Savage. There is no code to protect her, there is no alternative. She must return these calls or run the risk of offending.

CARNEGIE AMASSING BIG LIBRARY

SNAPSHOT OF SKIBO CASTLE, SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

While Andrew Carnegie is devoting the major portion of his millions to the bestowal of free public libraries upon the various municipalities of America and England, the millionaire philanthropist is not neglecting to gratify his own passion for books. At the cost of about $50,000 he is amassing a collection of books at Skibo Castle that will arouse the envy of every bibliomaniac who is fortunate enough to get a glimpse of them. There will be 8,000 volumes in all and they have been chosen strictly for their worth, and not for their looks.
