ANTHRACITE STRIKERS MAKE UP VAST ARMY

The latest developments in the big anthracite coal strike are being eagerly watched by the whole country. The strikers number nearly 150,000. President Mitchell, who figured so prominently in the former coal strike, is confident that his men can this time hold their ground against the coal operators. The above halftone shows a typical group of breaker boys employed in the Pennsylvania mines and now among the strikers. Also latest portraits of President T. D. Nichols, district No. 1, United Mine Workers, and John T. Dempsey, secretary district No. 1, United Mine Workers, both prominent in the news of the big industrial struggle.
