As the guests arrived they were met by Mrs. C. H. Rudge and by her presented to Mrs. Lee, who stood in the parlor and received her friends in a lovely white satin gown with much fagoting and lace.

Six young misses, Ethel Burket, Claire Canon, Leota Powell, Lila Le Gore, Mary Stuart, and Catharine Lee, all attired in filmy white, seated the guests for the program, and afterwards assisted with the refreshments.

The dining room reflected the exquisite taste of Mrs. W. C. Phillips in its adornments, as she had entire charge of it. The snowy table linen was covered with a lattice of smilax dotted here and there with American beauties. To the ends of the smilax falling over the edges of the table, were attached American beauties making a gorgeous fringe all around, and a low mound of the same royal blooms formed the centre piece. A tall vase holding a sheaf of the beauties with immensely long stems stood beside each of the serving ladies.

Mrs. John B. Wright, in a white lace robe, poured coffee, and Mrs. J. C. Seacrest, wearing a black jetted robe, cut brick ice cream. Mrs. Jessie Stiles, gowned in black silk tissue with capuchon of real lace, presided over the serving table, which had a lace cover and was decorated with candles and flowers.

Mrs. Lee was assisted in the parlor by Mesdames R. T. Van Brunt, Thomas Marsland, Ralph E. Johnson, Frank Everts, C. H. Eubank, C. H. Warner, E. E. Brown, and Henry Mayer. Mrs. Van Brunt wore white silk tissue with Irish lace; Mrs. Thomas Marsland, white cloth; Mrs. Johnson, black net made decollete; Mrs. Everts, black taffeta; Mrs. Eubank, white silk crepe made decollete; Mrs. Warner, rose silk crepe; Mrs. Brown, gray silk; Mrs. Mayer, a pale blue demi-toilette. Mrs. Rudge wore white mousselin, and Mrs. Herbert Marsland, a hand-painted white silk gown made decollete; Mrs. Phillips, white net over pale blue silk.

Mirth and pleasure, wit and repartee, characterized the dinner given Tuesday evening by Mrs. C. C. White as a surprise to her daughter, Mrs. D. R. Hopkins of Crete, to celebrate her birthday. The banquet was served at small tables in five courses, and the gentlemen progressed with each course. On a card on each table was one stanza of Bayard Taylor's "Courtship." The place cards bore hand-painted heads, and one line from "Courtship," and by matching the lines with the stanza on the tables, the men found their places as they progressed. The tables were adorned with carnations, and the rooms in which the tables were laid were trimmed with American beauties, daffodils, and smilax. After dinner the guests played chess India, crokinole and finch. Those presents were Messieurs and Mesdames D. R. Hopkins, A. R. Talbot, C. F. Ladd, C. E. Sanderson, Henry Sanderson, Henry Mayer, G. J. States, L. E. Southwick, F. B. Ryons, Mrs. S. A. Latta, and Professor Heink.

A china shower for Miss Jennie Barber was given on Wednesday by Miss Elizabeth Marshall. Thirty members of Pi Beta Phi sorority were present. The "shower" took place in the library. A big bow of red satin ribbon, from which were suspended ever so many red hearts, was on the chandelier, and the ribbons radiated to the sides and corners of the room. On a table beneath the chandelier, was a large basket filled with pretty china, each piece being wrapped in white tissue paper and tied with red ribbon. It was the pleasant duty of the bride-elect to open the parcels and exhibit them to the admiring eyes of the other girls. After the presents had been sufficiently exclaimed over, a supper was served in three courses. Out of town guests were Miss Gertrude Branch of Omaha, Miss Katharine Sedgwick of York, Miss Sue Ashmun of St. Joseph, Miss Iler of Omaha, Miss Anna Lytle of Greenwood.

The tenth annual Founders' Day banquet of Sigma Alpha Epsilon will be given this evening at the Lindell hotel. The royal purple and old gold of the fraternity will be used in decorating. Mr. George Porter Shidler will preside as toastmaster. The program of toasts will be:

"Founder's Day"..... Mr. W. Hugh Edmiston
 "Lambda Pi"..... Mr. C. W. Ward Clapp
 "The Tie that Binds"..... Mr. C. C. Barker
 "They Will Be Boys"..... Mr. Everett Sawyer
 "The Convention"..... Mr. Murray E. Townsend
 "Our Girls"..... Mr. George Knapp Bartlett
 "The Goat"..... Mr. Ted Faulkner
 "Sigma Alpha Epsilon"..... Mr. Clarence E. Teft
 "Good Night"..... Toastmaster

Among the out of town guests will be Messieurs Clarence Teft, Ernie Haughton, Arthur Harmer, Hal Minor, Harvey Ostenburg, Charles Headrick, Lloyd J. Killian, Charles Bowlby, C. C. Barker, Sid White and Charles Stewart. Covers will be laid for fifty-five.

A unique form of entertainment recently tried in New York was a hearts party quite out of the ordinary. In various corners of the house were scattered the young women guests, and the masculine ones were expected to progress from one to the other, proposing to each as they went. If the young woman said yes, she would give him a heart; if it was a refusal, he would receive a mitter. Three minutes was the time limit, and when the affair was over prizes were given to the young men with the largest number of hearts. This new game was productive of much amusement, and the young women so entertained are forever able to say that they have had many proposals.

In honor of their guest, Miss Grace Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. George Woods gave a card party Thursday evening. Euchre was the game, and prizes were won by Miss Putnam, Miss Hays, Mr. Merrill and Mr. Lau. The decorations were red shades, red roses, and jonquills. A two-course supper was served. Guests were Misses Harrison, Hays, and Putnam; Messieurs Joyce, Hays, Holmes, Richards, Fitzgerald, Van Ness, Butler, Smith; Messieurs and Mesdames Lewis Marshall, W. G. Morrison, Elmer Merrill, John Dorgan, George Crancer, Homer Honeywell, Peter Lau, C. F. Ladd, Frank Woods, and Mark Woods.

A rose-hued dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Burnham at their home Tuesday evening. Twelve covers were laid at the dining table, and four each at three small tables. On the large table was a lace centre piece on which a mirror held a cut-glass bowl of rose colored tulips. Bunches of the tulips, tied with ribbon of the same color, lay on the table, and similar bunches were on the small tables. The dinner was an elaborate one, served in nine courses.

Mr. James Van Burg, a member of Sigma Chi fraternity, was surprised at his home in Hickman last Sunday by a visit from some of his fraternity brothers, who went at the invitation of his mother and sister to help him celebrate his birthday. The table was adorned with white roses, the fraternity flower, and the colors were introduced by bunches of violets tied with gold ribbon. A three-course dinner was served to Messieurs Hansen, Stratton, Asthaller, Whitmore, Gould, De Lacy and Van Burg.

Mrs. C. C. White will give a dinner tomorrow in honor of the birthday of her daughter, Mrs. Fred B. Ryons. Those invited besides Mr. and Mrs. Ryons are Mr. and Mrs. Phil R. Easterday, Miss Olive States, Miss Laura Ryons, Mr. George Johnston, Mr. Leon Crandall, Mr. Herbert States and Mr. Arthur Ryons.

"THE ONLY WOMAN WOODMAN"

The members of the Modern Woodmen of America take great pride in their uniformed forester teams. These teams have become a very important part of the life and success of the many thousand local camps scattered throughout the Woodmen jurisdiction. Among the "crack" forester teams of Lincoln is that representing State of Nebraska Camp, No. 2266. This team is under the command of Captain C. P. Walters, whose efficient military training has brought the team up to a high degree of efficiency. The foresters of No. 2266 are not only proficient disciples of military tactics but have varied talents in other directions. At a recent meeting, after the camp had elected delegates to the county convention and endorsed the candidacy of Neighbor A. R. Talbot for head consul, the evening was given over to the forester team. They gave a vaudeville entertainment that was highly pleasing to the large number present. Among the numbers that attracted special attention was the clever female impersonating and contortion work of Forester Frank R. Jacobs. Mr. Jacobs is an artist of much ability in these lines, and his appearance that evening in the role of the "only woman woodman" created a storm of applause. He not only looked and acted the part, but also rendered some soprano solos to cap the climax. Later in the evening Mr. Jacobs appeared as a contortionist, doing several different turns that displayed more than ordinary ability. The Courier presents three different views of Mr. Jacobs as an impersonator and contortionist.
